Riverside Golf Club
North Riverside, Illinois | www.rgc1893.org

Organization

Founded in 1893, Riverside Golf Club is located in North Riverside, Illinois, just west of the city of Chicago. Through the years, the club has gone through many renovations and today is a beautiful club with member dining, a recently renovated ballroom/banquet facility, pool facilities for family activities and a crown jewel of a golf course. The golf course is one of the oldest and finest in the Midwest. The original course was designed by William Langford. The club acquired an additional 25 acres of land where the new holes were designed by Dick Nugent. In 2005, a practice facility and a redesign of the 18th hole and parking lot were completed by Bob Lohman. Most recently, the green surrounds and bunkers were returned to the original design by Dave Esler. Riverside is the oldest club west of the Allegheny Mountains existing on its original site.

The clubhouse suffered a fire in 1984 and was completely rebuilt along with an update to the pool facility. The clubhouse, with two levels, has member dining inside and outside with scenic views of the golf course, along with attractive locker rooms and an expansive pro shop.

Throughout its history, Riverside has hosted many high-level public golf events, both PGA and USGA, and is known for its tall majestic trees, tight fairways and undulating fast greens. The Des Plaines River and its tributaries make for interesting play on several holes. The golf course provides an enjoyable round of golf and challenges players of all abilities.

The club’s annual gross revenues are $5 million with food and beverage revenue of $1.4 million. Total staff in season reaches 125 employees. The current membership is 350 in all categories.
